

Deferred Compensation 101: What it is and why you should consider it

By Gary Pattengale, CFP®, Advanced Tax Specialist

For high-earning executives and key employees, traditional 401(k) plans often fall short of meeting long-term financial goals. Strict IRS contribution limits restrict how much you can save in a tax-advantaged way.

That's where deferred compensation plans come in. These offer a powerful way to contribute significantly more than a 401(k), reduce current tax liability, and enhance retirement income.

What is it?

Deferred compensation is a supplemental retirement plan typically offered to high-earning executives and key employees. It allows you to postpone receiving a portion of your salary or bonus until a future date—usually retirement. And like a 401(k), this strategy can lower your current tax bill in high-earning years and grow the funds on a tax-deferred basis.

How it works

Deferred compensation plans are in many ways similar to traditional 401(k) plans:

- Contributions are made on a pre-tax basis.
- Investments grow tax deferred.
- Distributions are taxed as ordinary income.
- Some plans may offer employer matching contributions.

Key differences

However, there are important distinctions:

- No contribution limits: Nonqualified Deferred Compensation (NQDC) plans are not subject to IRS contribution caps. However, the plan itself may limit how much you can add.

- Payroll taxes still apply: You'll still owe Social Security and Medicare taxes on deferred income.
- Lack of ERISA protection: These plans are not protected under ERISA, making them unsecured liabilities of the employer.
- No IRA rollovers: You typically cannot roll over NQDC assets into an IRA to continue tax deferral if you leave your employer.

Election timing

You must elect your deferral amount and payout schedule — usually in the calendar year prior to when the compensation is earned. Once made, these elections are often irrevocable or very difficult to change.

Risks to consider

- Creditor risk: Because NQDC plans are unsecured, your deferred funds could be at risk if your employer becomes insolvent.
- Liquidity risk: Ensure you have sufficient liquidity to meet your financial needs while deferring income.
- Investment risk: Poor investment choices can offset the tax advantages of deferral.
- Limited portability: If you leave your job, you generally cannot transfer these funds to an IRA.

Who should consider it?

Deferred compensation plans may be a good fit for individuals who max out their 401(k) and want to save more, expect to be in a lower tax bracket during retirement, and are confident in the financial health of their organization and plan to stay long-term.

It can also be used to offset or neutralize the cost of other strategies. For example:

- Softening the tax burden of Roth conversions: When you convert an existing IRA to a Roth, the converted amount is generally subject to ordinary tax. By deferring compensation in the same year, you can offset that income and shift the tax burden to a potentially lower tax year in the future. At the same time, you create a tax-free bucket for retirement and legacy purposes.
- Offsetting the lost tax break on 401(k) catch-up contributions
Beginning January 1, 2026, employees age 50 and older must make all 401(k) catch-up contributions as Roth contributions. This means paying tax on those funds now, which is less- than-ideal for high-income taxpayers. To help offset the lost tax benefit, you can add the equivalent amount to a deferred compensation plan instead, preserving the advantage of lowering current taxable income, and maintaining pre-tax growth potential.

As you can see, there are many complexities. Your dedicated Mesirow Wealth Advisor can help you navigate the nuances and make informed decisions.

About the Author

Gary is a Wealth Advisor and Advanced Planning specialist in our Highland Park, Illinois office, serving clients in the Chicago area and nationwide. He has deep experience with executive and stock-based compensation plans, including stock options, restricted stock, and deferred compensation. He combines his tax knowledge, executive compensation experience and capital markets expertise to help clients reduce their tax burdens and achieve their unique goals. Contact Gary Pattengale at 847.681.2333 or gary.pattengale@mesirow.com.

Mesirow does not provide legal or tax advice. Past performance is not indicative of future results. The views expressed above are as of the date given, may change as market or other conditions change, and may differ from views expressed by other Mesirow associates. This is not a solicitation to buy or sell the securities mentioned. Do not use this information as the sole basis for investment decisions, it is not intended as advice designed to meet the particular needs of an individual investor. Information herein has been obtained from sources which Mesirow believes to be reliable, we do not guarantee its accuracy and such information may be incomplete and/or condensed. All opinions and estimates included herein are subject to change without notice. This communication may contain privileged and/or confidential information. It is intended solely for the use of the addressee. If you are not the intended recipient, you are strictly prohibited from disclosing, copying, distributing or using any of the information. If you receive this communication in error, please contact the sender immediately and destroy the material in its entirety, whether electronic or hard copy. This material is for informational purposes only and is not intended as an offer or solicitation with respect to the purchase or sale of any security.

Mesirow refers to Mesirow Financial Holdings, Inc. and its divisions, subsidiaries and affiliates. The Mesirow name and logo are registered service marks of Mesirow Financial Holdings, Inc. ©2026, Mesirow Financial Holdings, Inc. All rights reserved. Any opinions expressed are subject to change without notice. Past performance is not indicative of future results. Advisory Fees are described in Mesirow Financial Investment Management, Inc.'s Form ADV Part 2A. Advisory services offered through Mesirow Financial Investment Management, Inc. an SEC registered investment advisor. Securities offered by Mesirow Financial, Inc. member FINRA and SIPC.