3Q2020 Capital Markets & Investment Banking Market Update

M&A 3Q2020 review: Packaging sector

After a sharp decline in share prices and a collapse in M&A activity in late 1Q2020 / early 2Q2020, the packaging sector has experienced a recovery with share prices for plastic packaging slightly above those at the beginning of the year. As the packaging sector overall has performed well during the pandemic, valuations have also recovered and are currently above their past three-year average. M&A activity is expected to be very active in 2021.

M&A activity is gradually picking up and is expected to be quite strong in 2021 for the following reasons:

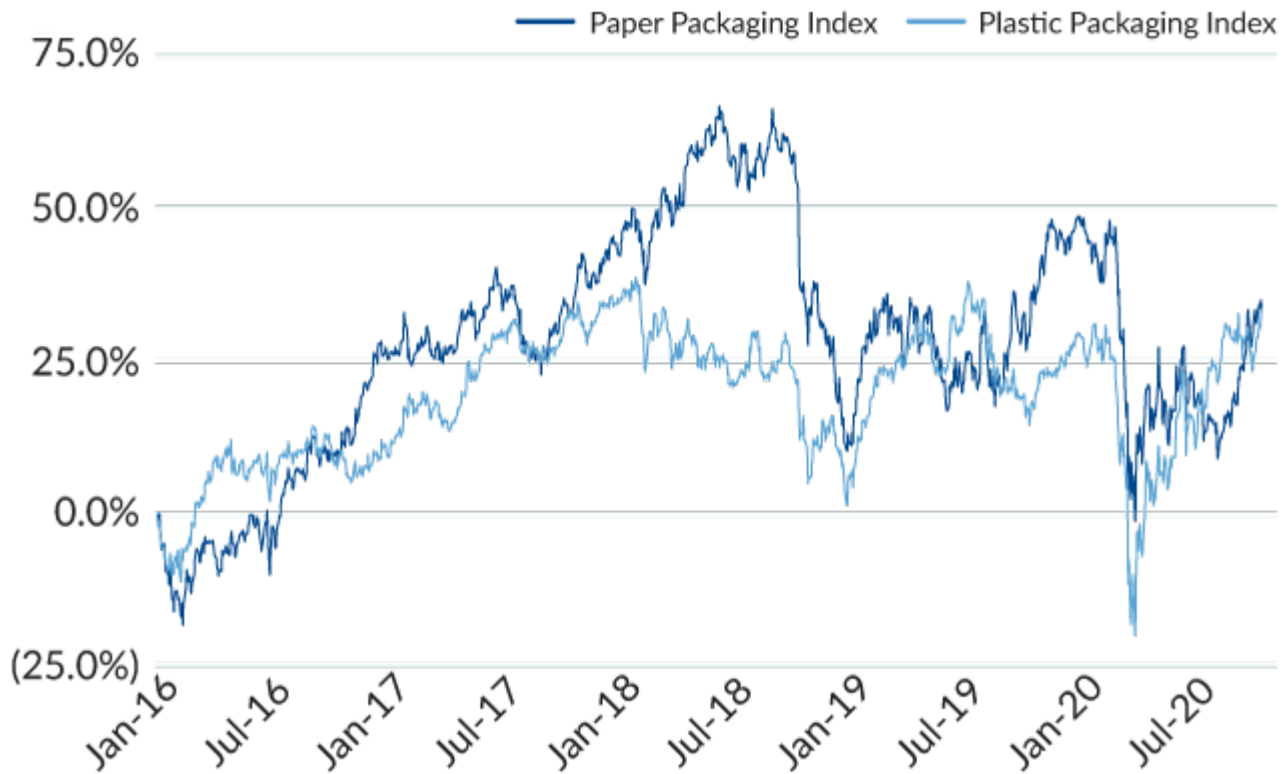

- Packaging in general is a primary beneficiary of the impacts resulting from COVID-19
- Pent-up demand due to lack of M&A transactions in 2020
- Private equity sponsors have significant equity capital (over $1.7 trillion of “dry powder” [Chart 6]) that they need to deploy
- Strategic buyers looking for acquisitions to obtain growth, scale, diversification and synergies
- Availability of debt capital at very attractive cost from a historical perspective

Share price performance and public market valuations

Share prices of packaging companies have begun to rebound nicely after their sharp decline following the lock-down in mid-March (Chart 1). These share prices are currently slightly above the levels at the beginning of the year with plastic packaging up 4% on average YTD, though they are down 10% on average YTD for paper packaging.

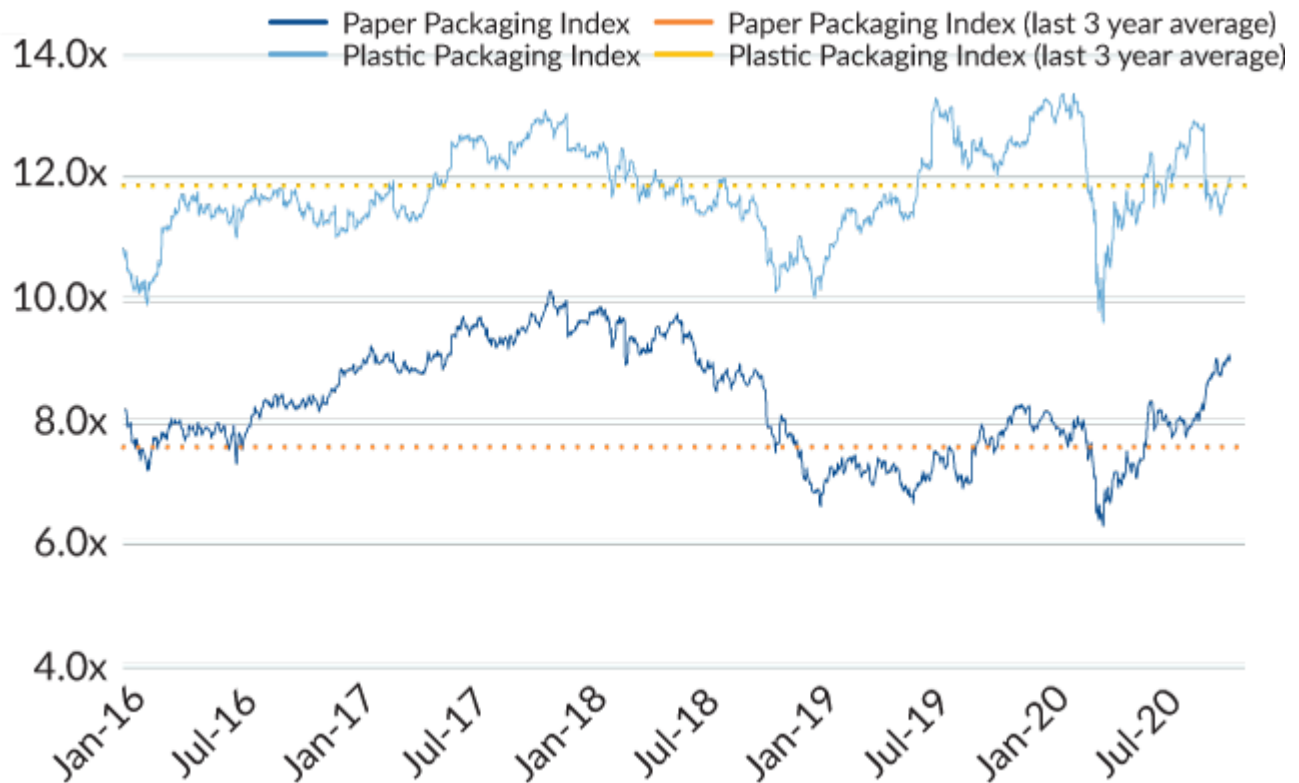

Consequently, public market valuations for both plastic and paper packaging companies have also recovered. Plastic packaging companies' valuations are slightly above (1%) their past three year-average, while paper packaging companies' valuations are up 19% from their past three-year average (Charts 2 and 3).

Market Update

MAA gQ2020 review: Packaging sector

After a sharp decline in share prices and a collapse in M&A activity in late Q3/Q4 2019 / early Q1/Q2 2020, the packaging sector has experienced a recovery with share prices for global packaging slightly above those at the beginning of the year. As the packaging sector overall has performed well during the pandemic, valuations have also recovered and are currently above their post-2008 year average. M&A activity is expected to be very active in 2021.

M&A activity is gradually picking up and is expected to be quite strong in 2021 for the following reasons:

- Packaging in general is a primary beneficiary of the impacts resulting from COVID-19.
- Pick-up demand due to lack of M&A transactions in 2020.
- Private equity sponsors have significant equity capital base (5-7 trillion of the "pocket" Chart 4) that they need to deploy.
- Strategic buyers looking for acquisitions to obtain growth, scale, diversification and synergies.
- Availability of debt capital at very attractive cost from a historical perspective.

Share price performance and public market valuations

Share prices of packaging companies have begun to rebound since their sharp decline following the lock-down in April 2020 (Chart 1). These share prices are currently slightly above the levels at the beginning of the year with global packaging up 4% on average (YTD through Aug), are down 33% on average (YTD) for paper packaging.

Consequently, public market valuations for both plastic and paper packaging companies have also recovered. Plastic packaging companies' valuations are slightly above (up) their post-2008 year average, while paper packaging companies' valuations are up 15% from their post-2008 year average (Charts 2 and 3).
