2020 Year-End Review: Paper, Plastics & Packaging

2020: Year-end review

After a sharp decline in share prices and a collapse in M&A activity in late 1Q2020 / early 2Q2020, the packaging sector has experienced a strong recovery with share prices for plastic packaging companies ~15% above those at the beginning of the year, while share prices for paper packaging companies ended up about flat. As the packaging sector overall has performed well during the pandemic, valuations have also recovered and are currently above their past three-year average, especially for paper packaging companies. M&A activity is expected to be strong in 2021, although might be a bit slow initially as buyer and seller valuation expectations adjust to the normalized post-COVID-19 profitability levels (instead of current levels).

Share price performance and public market valuations

Share prices of packaging companies rebounded nicely after their sharp decline following the lock-down in mid-March (Chart 1). Share prices for plastic packaging companies ended up 14% for the year, while those for paper packaging companies ended down 1%.

Consequently, public market valuations for both plastic and paper packaging companies have also recovered. Plastic packaging companies' valuations at the end of the year were at 12.3x EV / EBITDA versus their three year average of 11.9x, while paper packaging companies' valuations were at 9.9x EV / EBITDA versus their three year average of 8.1x (Charts 2 and 3).
